I would oppose the waiver application based on the concept that the pay to play without notice to the public, as currently required, would in effect cause a form of "subliminal" advertising, contrary to the concept of transparency in advertising. Having an online listing rule of such instances in addition to the current rule, if not already in place, would seem to be a practical and helpful way of allowing the public to verify that the rule as it now stands is being followed.