I'm 27, and commercial radio has been pretty awful for almost as long as I can remember. It is characterized by a terrible lack of variety. I listen mainly to college radio stations and public radio stations, just because every commercial music radio station falls into one of like 5 categories: easy listening, oldies/classic rock, pop, urban contemporary/pop, contemporary rock/post grunge. And all of these stations play the same songs over and over again. I could probably work for 2 hours literally writing out on a piece of paper 65% of what is played on these stations because I hear it all the time, even without actively tuning into these stations myself. We don't need to make it any more painless for large record companies and entertainment conglomerates to get their catalogs pushed on major radio stations.
