I am a musician and a music lover and am already very disappointed with what radio has become. Please don't allow them to make it worse. People need diverse musical inspiration to be able to think in different ways in order to do their best to aid our society. Radio play "predictability" for the sake of "profitability" is robbing our culture and could very well be the thing that keeps our greatest thinkers from having their next great idea. Our radio is stagnant enough as it is; please don't let it get worse by allowing the payola disclosure requirement to be waived. If these people are going to continue to sell out our culture for the sake of a few more dollars, then they should at least have to own up to it in public. Thank you.
