Re: Telephone Number Portability, et al., CC Docket No. 95-116, WC Docket Nos. 07-149 & 09-109

Dear Ms. Dortch:

As a result of Telcordia’s purchase by Ericsson in January 2012, the pre-close Telcordia’s business units that provided operations support systems and service delivery solutions were integrated into Ericsson, as part of Ericsson’s business plans. Telcordia’s government solutions business unit became a subsidiary (TT Government Solutions, Inc., d/b/a Applied Communications Sciences) of Telcordia Technologies, Inc. TT Government Solutions, Inc. was then subsequently acquired by Vencore (formerly the SI Organization). The other parts of legacy Telcordia, including U.S. and foreign local number portability, Telecom Routing Administration, Common Language, and SMS aggregation services, all remained within Telcordia and do business under the brand iconectiv.¹ At present, Telcordia d/b/a iconectiv has approximately 300 employees.

Telcordia operates under its own accounting system, separate from Ericsson’s system. For a period after the Ericsson acquisition, Telcordia continued to operate on its pre-close legacy accounting system. Telcordia transitioned from that legacy system directly to its current accounting system, and thus has never operated under the Ericsson accounting system.

If Telcordia is selected as the LNPA, its U.S. LNPA operations—primarily the operation of the U.S. Number Portability Administration Clearinghouse database—will be a separate reporting structure (i.e. division) within Telcordia, with its business unit head reporting directly to the CEO.

¹ Post-acquisition, Telcordia also provides business intelligence services under the iconectiv brand.
With respect to the five-member management board, the only member of that board who is not a U.S. citizen is Peter Heuman. All others are U.S. citizens.

Please let me know if you have further questions.

Sincerely,

John T. Nakahata
Counsel to Telcordia Technologies, Inc., dba iconectiv
