I do not think the internet should be altered to allow two different speeds. This will increase the cost for consumers because companies pay higher fees to be able to access higher speeds for their customer base, those fees will then be passed on to their customers. I have already received an email that their costs could possibly be increasing.

Cable companies will start to change packaging to be able to charge different pricing for different speeds as cable companies already do. Which means that for customers to be able to get better service they will have to pay more money.

This will also hinder those who are starting out business and do not have the capital to be able to purchase the higher waive of internet streams for their future customers. This further creates an uneven playing field for richer and poorer. The companies who are in support of this change have been able to make millions of dollars from the services they provide without net neutrality. Now that they have made all this money they can afford to sign on to a change that will make it more difficult for newer companies starting out to have the same access they did when they were smaller companies.

I do not agree with this change. I feel it is a disservice to smaller companies and the average american. We are the ones who will hurt the most if this change takes place.
