RE: MB Docket No. 10-56

Dear Chairman Genachowski,

I write you in my capacity as Executive Director of the Inclusion Center for Community & Justice to share Comcast's commitment to Utah's communities and to support the proposed venture with NBC Universal. The Inclusion Center, one of the oldest nonprofits in the nation, works to overcome prejudice bigotry and discrimination.

Comcast has provided tremendous support for our efforts and initiatives including our Camp Anytown program. A program that engages young people from diverse backgrounds in exercises geared towards self awareness, conflict resolution, and the development of communication skills necessary to peacefully resolve prejudice and bigotry. Our program's sustainability has been attributed to Comcast's significant support. Beyond the financial support, together we have developed strategies that have truly made a difference for all people in Utah. A high level Comcast executive has joined the Inclusion Center board of directors, which has lent to our long term vision for our state and the health of the organization. Also, Comcast and the Center have worked on many hands on community projects that have targeted disenfranchised communities.

Comcast's efforts to advance inclusion are not limited to supporting us. The company demonstrates its commitment to inclusion in its daily business activities as well. Comcast offers programming that reflects the diverse cultures of its customers and has signed programming deals with multicultural networks from around the world to better serve the needs of its diverse subscriber base.

In addition, we are impressed by Comcast support for diversity among its supplier network providing every company an equal opportunity to compete for Comcast's business, regardless of ownership or size. Beyond its partnerships and outreach they also offer training for minority-owned businesses and partners with organizations that promote diversity including the National Urban League and the Hispanic Chambers of Commerce.

At the Inclusion Center, we believe that Comcast's track record in support of diversity and inclusion is impressive. As you review this transaction, please keep that record in mind.

Sincerely,

R. Kilo Zamora, MSW
