Re: MB Docket No. 10-56

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

I am the President and CEO of the Urban League of Portland, Oregon, and I write to attest to Comcast's commitment to our community and to promoting diversity in Portland. As such, I encourage the FCC's support for the joining of Comcast and NBC Universal.

As you may know, the Urban League is the nation's oldest and largest African American community-based movement. We are devoted to empowering African Americans to enter the economic and social mainstream. Here in Portland, the Urban League has played a pivotal role in advocating for fair housing and employment for over 65 years, and nationally we are celebrating a centennial of service to America. Today, as at our inception, education is at the top of agenda.

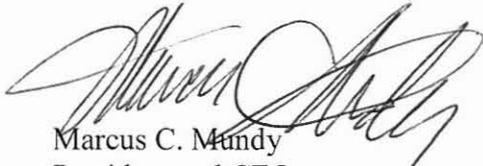

Comcast shares our commitment to education and has been a vital partner in increasing educational opportunities for African Americans in Portland. They were an early supporter of our Portland Urban League Success In Education (PULSE) program which engages under-achieving low-income students of color in enrichment activities that promote academic success. Comcast support helps provide for an after-school tutorial program for middle-school and high school students in several local schools, as well as mentoring and leadership development programs.

Comcast has further honored the Urban League of Portland through its support during "Comcast Cares" staff volunteer days annually, their support of our Annual Career Fair (up to and including providing hours upon hours of advertising and public information about our community events), and their intellectual time, energy and leadership by allowing key executives to join our Board of Directors (most recently Theresa Davis of their office here).

As a celebration of Comcast's work with the Urban League of Portland and on behalf of their work throughout Portland, last year we honored the late Comcast executive Debbie Luppold with the Equal Opportunity Award, the Urban League of Portland's highest award. This award, which is given annually during our Equal Opportunity Day Awards Dinner, celebrates those individuals and businesses whose good work has helped to open the doors of opportunity for, and defend the equality of, all of our community.

As you weigh the merits of Comcast's union with NBC Universal, I would ask that you consider Comcast's commitment to diversity and its support of the Urban League of Portland.

Sincerely,

Marcus C. Mundy
President and CEO
Urban League of Portland
