

7521380096.txt

Net Neutrality is crucial to fair competition and free speech, and this proposal is a disaster in the making. It would open the door to widespread discrimination that would limit the speech of startups, nonprofits and everyday Internet users who cannot afford these absurd and unnecessary tolls.

It is long since time to recognize that the internet has become another utility, and regulate it as such - rather than opening an important speech venue to total control by a monopoly that has already amassed too much power and influence.