

My objection to Google's Project Loon, as well as any other space-based wifi projects, like Space X's wifi satellites, and Facebook's wifi satellites and drones, is that a small group of technocrats do NOT have the right to decide to blanket the earth in microwave radiation on the assumption that every corner of humanity must have, and desperately wants, this technology. This assumption is false. It is the height of arrogance for profit-making entities to make such a decision for the rest of the earth's inhabitants, especially when it imposes a health, privacy and environmental risk for them. This manmade microwave radiation technology has gotten completely out of hand. In the frenzy to make quick bucks, as well as spy on people and control them, not to mention dumbing them down and damaging their health (which brings in more profits), every corner of our public spaces is being blanketed with this toxin, our homes, our schools and workplaces, our environment, our automobiles, and now space. I don't think God gave these domains to a few less than ethical technology companies. And our government should not either. It is not to be ignored that the elite, in their own words, have championed population reduction, which this does magnificently. (see David Rockefeller's biography, for example). This radiation makes people sick. I know because I get sick when I am in a heavily radiated environment. I also know because of the hundreds and thousands of sources out there, expert and scientific, which have proven this. (see cellphonetaskforce.org, c4st.org, mercola.com, Ron Powell's articles on scrib.com/doc/291507610) There is no doubt of this, despite the fraudulent 1996 Telecommunications Act that industry lobbyists passed. Not only does it make people sick, it damages DNA and cells, reproduction, clear thinking, migration of birds and bees, causes cancers, the list goes on. The military would not use microwave as weaponry if this were not the case. Something that is weaponry to them, should not be forced on us. Poison is poison. The Google balloons would try to force radiation into unserved areas. This is criminal. They would also pose a hazard of interfering with airplanes, drones, electric lines, homes, and also of crashing, which balloons do frequently. They are subject to wind and weather, and must be replaced frequently. They could also be used to spy on the public. This whole idea is terrible. Likewise, wifi satellites would just increase the microwave radiation already coming from weather satellites, spy satellites, military satellites, communication satellites, etc. Arthur Firstenberg, at cellphonetaskforce.org lists infant mortality results which clearly spike every time a new satellite is launched and adds a new layer of radiation. Dr. Joseph Mercola at mercola.com has said that brain cancer is the leading cancer killer in children replacing leukemia. This change directly correlates with the increase in wireless technologies being forced onto everyone. This technology is so lethal...long term and short term, that it should be outlawed and dismantled, and would be if good people were in positions of authority everywhere. (There are safe alternatives such as landline phones, cable, DSL, fiber optics and ethernet). IF it is allowed to continue, there should be, at the least, a choice of safe vs unsafe technologies (free market) and areas set aside where this is banned from use, such as schools, public transportation, public libraries, public universities, rural areas, etc. The future of humanity and our earth is at stake. Please do NOT approve any applications for this type of technology to be imposed on humanity.
