

<http://www.telecompaper.com/news/french-law-to-forbid-wi-fi-in-kindergartens--1062467#.VMyw0oWyAIE.facebook>

French law to forbid Wi-Fi in kindergartens

Friday 30 January 2015 | 11:30 CET | News

The French parliament has adopted a bill forbidding the installation of Wi-Fi in establishments for children aged under 3 years, but not, as first drafted, in primary schools, announced national frequencies regulator ANFR. Establishments offering public Wi-Fi access will now have to display a symbol indicating its presence. The law calls for "sobriety, transparency and consultation with respect to exposure to electromagnetic emissions." An information campaign will be launched this year to urge the "reasoned and reasonable use" of mobile devices, accessories such as hands-free kits. Mobile phone advertising will have to mention recommended usage to limit exposure to the head.

<http://www.telecompaper.com/news/french-health-agency-recommends-reducing-exposure-to-mobiles--696903>

<http://www.telecompaper.com/news/paris-councillors-seek-reassurances-about-wifi-health-risks--623982>

<http://www.telecompaper.com/news/french-lawmakers-bury-bill-on-emissions-risks--922604>

<http://www.telecompaper.com/news/electro-hypersensitives-call-for-signal-free-zones-in-france--964896>

Related Info

Electro-hypersensitives call for signal-free zones in France

4 Sep 2013 | France | News

French lawmakers bury bill on emissions risks

4 Feb 2013 | France | News

French health agency recommends reducing exposure to mobiles

15 Oct 2009 | France | News

Paris councillors seek reassurances about Wi-Fi health risks

18 Jun 2008 | France | News